

Girl Guiding Association HQ and Nadler Hotel

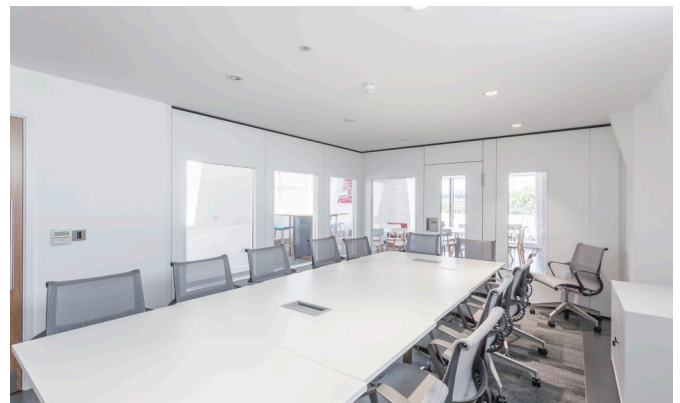

Buckingham Palace Road, London, UK

Appointed by Girl Guiding on a multi-disciplinary basis, Cundall designed the conversion of 17-19 Buckingham Palace into Girl Guiding's headquarters and a 73 bedroom boutique hotel for Nadler.

Cundall provided telecommunications, computer room, structured cabling, audio visual and security design services. The conversion of the building presented several challenges in terms of physically accommodating IT, due to restricted floor to ceiling heights and structural constraints. Through an integrated design approach and consideration of space efficient design to minimise IT rooms and voids, these challenges have been overcome, maximising office space along with back of house hotel functions.

Benefits:

- Integrated and space efficient multi-disciplinary design.
- Clear specification and cost certainty for IT and audio visual.
- Nadler Hotel stakeholder approval for IT and audio visual, enabling a smooth transition from build to Hotel pre-opening.

As well as IT and audio visual Cundall also provided building services and structural engineering and security

Client Girl Guiding Association
Architect Orbit

Photography CGS Photographers